"One voice alone is not very loud, but thousands of voices together can be loud enough that nobody can ignore them. One penny doesn't buy you anything, but when we all pool our pennies together, when we all pitch in and do our part by contributing to AFGE PAC, then we have real power to elect the kind of lawmakers who will fight for a better life for federal and D.C. government employees."

Everett B. Kelley, AFGE National President

Your Contribution Fuels our Fight

Politics Matter

You have a very personal stake in who gets elected. As a government employee, the lawmakers who get elected determine your pay, benefits, job security and agency funding. This year, some lawmakers have threatened to cut all four. By participating in AFGE PAC you can help choose who is looking out for your best interests on Capitol Hill.

AFGE-PAC: How Does it Work?

We support candidates who advocate for government employees regardless of party affiliation. Our collective contributions build relationships which are critical to passing or defeating key legislation.

Strength in Numbers

A large PAC sends a clear message to Congress: our members are politically informed, motivated, involved and want their voices heard.
