WHAT WE DO: AFGE provides legal representation, technical expertise, and informational services for our members. We train our members to become activists at their workplace and in their communities, help them make their voices heard in media at the local, regional, and national level, keep them up-to-date on the benefits that come with their union membership, and are the nation's leading legislative advocate for federal and D.C. government workers.

ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE: AFGE is headquartered in Washington D.C., with 12 regional district offices representing every U.S. state, territory, and the District of Columbia (pictured above) directed by their own national vice president. There are also dozens of agency-based councils. Collectively they administer support services to AFGE's nearly 1,000 locals and over 280,000 members.

WHO WE ARE: Our members are the workers that make America work. We are correctional officers, lawyers, park rangers, mechanics, transportation security officers, and more.

HIGHEST MEMBERSHIP CONCENTRATION: Department of Veterans Affairs, Social Security Administration, Department of Defense, Department of Homeland Security.
